The production was interrupted in 1919. The caliber should always be 6.5x52mm. Model 91/24 Moschetto Model 91/24 Length36.25ments e ávelop Barrel17.81 á, ávelop6.53 lbsights300 meters and adjustable 600-1,500 from 1924 to 1929 about 260,000 m1891 long guns converted into T.S. Coal of patterns. The first models may have been perforated and inserted new tubes of rifles, but most conversions only meant reducing the barrel and repeatedly coponous. These coal can be easily identified as they still have the most long -sighted base. These rifles should only be found in 6.5x52mm. Model 91/28 Moschetto Model 91/28 Length36.06 á, ávelop6.81 lbsights300 meters and adjustable 600-1,500 this is simply a new production model 91/24, although some original M91 M91 T.S. The rifles were supplied in the M91/28 motif. The bases of rear mirini are more short like the original coal. The caliber should be 6.5x52mm. Few rifles were produced for use with the M28 grenady launcher, which was quickly suspended. Produced since 1928-1938. Model 38 FUCLE Model 91/38 Length40.12nd2nd á, ávelop6.81 lbsights300 Meter Vocchi fixed only the 1938 model has marked the adoption of the short rifle and doctrine of the rifle for the Italian military forces. The very early rifles are lacking in a lowest rod band and have long and uninterrupted hand guards that extend to the hood. First combined with a folding bayonet, these were subsequently converted or new in a fixed form. Many rifles have been sold in Finland and will present a SA brand on the barrel. This rifle was introduced in the new 7.35x51mm cartridge, but later it was returned to 6.5x52 mm a of logistic questions in the Italian army. the caliber can be determined by reading the rear viewfinder. some rifles were later converted by the German military to emergency rifles in 7.92x57 mm. these will have the gauge marked on the barrel. model 38 cavalry musket model 91/38 91/38 Length36.06eÁÁÁBarrel Length17.63eÁÁÁWeight6.62 lbsights200 meter fixed sights* Model 1938 Cavalry carbines mirrored original M91 cavalry carbines but featured fixed sights. *FNA-Brescia did return to the adjustable rear sight (200 meter battle sight with 600-1500 meter adjustable) when they began producing in 6.5x52mm again. Some may have stocks previously produced and unused for the M91/28 rifles intended to equip the M28 grenade launcher. These will feature prominent replacement wood fittings in a bid to recycle raw materials. Produced until 1944. This rifle was introduced in the new 7.35x51mm cartridge but later reverted to 6.5x52mm because of logistical issues in the Italian military. Caliber may be determined by reading the rear sight. Some rifles were later converted by the German military to emergency rifles in 7.92x57mm. These will have the caliber marked on the barrel. Additionally, some were converted to 7.92x57mm post war in attempts to market to the middle east. These will be marked on the rear sight and the stock. More about the M38 Cavalry can be found here, Model 38 T.S. Moschetto Modello 91/38 Truppe Speciali Length36.5eÁÁÁBarrel Length17.75eÁÁÁWeight6.37 lbsights200 meter fixed sights This is a continuation of the original M91 T.S. carbine and featured in the same specialty roles. All versions feature simplified, fixed rear sights. Production continued until at least 1943, perhaps into 1944. This rifle was introduced in the new 7.35x51mm cartridge but later reverted to 6.5x52mm because of logistical issues in the Italian military. Caliber may be determined by reading the rear sight. Additionally, some were converted to 7.92x57mm post war in attempts to market to the middle east. These will be marked on the rear sight and the stock. Model 1941 Fucile Modello 41 Length46eÁÁÁBarrel Length27.19eÁÁÁWeight8.5 lbsights300 meters and adjustable 300-1,000 Having failed to convert to the 7.35x51mm cartridge, He also started to regret their brief-rifle-Fixed-Sights-Only campaign. Some productions of the 1891 model have started again, but it was a tension on resources. The M1941 was slightly short and was the adjustable rear view in charcoal style. Due to the Italian surrender in 1943, many of these rifles did not see the service and often find themselves in mint conditions. Others, however, have been manufactured under the German occupation. The production continued until 1944. Some rifles were converted by the German army into 7.92x57mm rifles. These will have the caliber marked on the barrel. A little more on 41 can be found here. C&linal releases their peak series á e øPrimerá e every other week. It focuses on a firearm of the Great War at a time, in depth with animations, demonstrations of live fire and historical context! Our mission is to document and describe historical military weapons from all over the world. We hope to share our love for all the attention that has gone in the design, development, production and issue of these pieces. The usual market price for any Carcano in the United States is low. It is even low in Germany. You would expect to pay between $ 50 and $ 125 for a specimen, depending on the quality (finding a carcan in excellent condition for $ 50 is luck; pay $ 100 for the same in "well used" condition means that you were A barrel, and not a shotgun ...). A good first starting point for price estimates is always the Blue Book (S.p. Fjestad: Blue Book of Gun Values, 18th ed. 1997, Us- $ 27.95 Sip. Retail). And then there are real and immediately identifiable rarities, which we know only from books: Moschetti Guardie Del Re (gold color), sniper rifles with scope, combinations of moschetti 91/28 Brenade... but they already seem very different. It is different when you are a specialized collector who buys from a specialized dealer or another Carcani fan. In this case (very rare), relative scarcity would be a determining factor in prices. If Dick Hobbs or Doug Bowser ask more about their guns, they are fully right because they are specialists and offer rare objects to other specialists. It's just like Iver Johnson's old revolver or Harrington & Richardson: are economical, regardless of how common or rare they can be. There are many thousands of much rarer stamps in blue Mauritius, but they cost only a small part of the price of the latter. "Precision marked" Carcani are quite common: They can command a small supplement if the barrel is still very good (otherwise, the sign - two stylized cross rifles overlapped with a small bullseye target - it is still useless), but it is nothing extraordinary. I still see them here. Here.
